Committee Reports

Engineering:

~Nothing new to report from Indy Rezone

~City specific bike standards-DPW Engineering has a binder of standards but it has not yet been shared

~Bike infrastructure in the city is being categorized but not yet in a useable form yet (may be worked on by summer intern)

~Bike parking information being collected and intern will be mapping this information over the summer

~Car Share-one charging station going in soon

~IndyGO Transit Center-no room for lockers at the station-possibly on the CC plaza (Alan Rainey to make some calls on this-also a redesign of plaza being done.

~Bus Rapid Transit-Engineering committee plans to make recommendations on bike routes/lanes to access the stops. (.5 to 1 mile on either side and perpendicular to the BRT routes)

No other committee reports

Trendy Minds

Jillian McIntyre of Trendy Minds gave an update on their progress on revamping the Knozone program. Jillian indicated that about 25 key stakeholder interviews were done and that a survey was conducted with the public on their perception of air quality in Indianapolis and how they viewed themselves in terms of their attitude toward a more sustainable lifestyle. Results were interesting. The breakdown of how the respondents viewed themselves (mostly women) were as follows:

14% Not Interested, Don't Care
33% Concerned but Intrigued
16% Confident and Proud
37% Fearless Advocate

More info will be forthcoming.
